UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Case No. 2:18-CR-41 JCM (CWH)

Plaintiff(s),

ORDER

v.

CLIFTON GEORGE NEWMAN, JR.,

Defendant(s).

Presently before the court is petitioner Clifton George Newman, Jr.'s motion to vacate, amend, or correct his sentence pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255. (ECF No. 38). The government filed a response, (ECF No. 40), to which petitioner replied, (ECF No. 41).

I. Background

Prior to his current term of incarceration, petitioner served several felony sentences: In 2001, he was convicted of felony possession of a controlled substance and served time. (ECF No. 40 (citing pre-sentence report)). In 2003, he was convicted of felony possession of a short-barreled shotgun and served time. (Id.). In 2005, he pled guilty to felony conspiracy and robbery. (Id.). He served time. (Id.).

On September 6, 2018, petitioner pled guilty to felon in possession of a firearm. (ECF No. 27). This court sentenced him to 46 months' imprisonment and three years of supervised release. (ECF Nos. 34, 35). An amended judgment was entered on March 18, 2019. (ECF No. 36). Petitioner did not appeal.

On March 31, 2020, petitioner filed his instant § 2255 motion in light of Rehaif v. United States, 139 S. Ct. 2191 (2019) ("Rehaif"). (ECF No. 38).

II. Legal Standard

Federal prisoners "may move . . . to vacate, set aside or correct [their] sentence" if the court imposed the sentence "in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States." 28

1 U.S.C. § 2255(a). Relief pursuant to § 2255 should be granted only where “a fundamental
 2 defect” caused “a complete miscarriage of justice.” Davis v. United States, 417 U.S. 333, 345
 3 (1974); see also Hill v. United States, 368 U.S. 424, 428 (1962).

4 Limitations on § 2255 motions exist because the movant “already has had a fair
 5 opportunity to present his federal claims to a federal forum,” whether or not he took advantage of 6 the opportunity. United States v. Frady, 456 U.S. 152, 164 (1982). Section 2255 “is not
 7 designed to provide criminal defendants multiple opportunities to challenge their sentence.”
 8 United States v. Johnson, 988 F.2d 941, 945 (9th Cir. 1993). Furthermore, a petitioner’s claims
 9 are procedurally barred if they could have been raised on direct appeal are not. Massaro v.
 10 United States, 538 U.S. 500, 504 (2003); Bousley v. United States, 523 U.S. 614, 622 (1998).
 11 However, procedural default is excused if the defendant can show cause and prejudice, or actual 12 innocence. Id.

12 III. Discussion

13 Petitioner brings his claim for relief in light of Rehaif. (ECF No. 38). There, the 14 Supreme Court held that, to convict under 18 U.S.C. § 924(c), the government must prove that 15 defendant knew he fell into a prohibited category. 139 S. Ct. at 2194. Petitioner’s indictment 16 and plea agreement did not include this additional mens rea element—that defendant knew his 17 legal status as a felon prohibited possession of a firearm. (ECF Nos. 1, 28). Petitioner contends
 18 that he is entitled to relief due to his indictment’s defect. (ECF No. 38). By failing to 19 appropriately describe the crime, defendant was stripped of several constitutional rights,
 20 specifically his Fifth Amendment grand jury protections, Fifth Amendment right not to be tried,
 21 and Sixth Amendment rights of notice and effective assistance of counsel. (Id.); see U.S. Const.
 22 amend. V; U.S. Const. amend. VI. “Rehaif’s required mens rea status element is absent from 23 every stage of Mr. Newman’s case, infecting the entire proceedings with constitutional errors.”
 24 (Id.). This court disagrees.

25 As an initial matter, petitioner is timely. See 28 U.S.C. § 2255(f)(3) (The one-year statute 26 of limitations for habeas relief runs from “the date on which the right asserted was initially
 27 recognized by the Supreme Court.”). Rehaif was issued on June 21, 2019, and the instant motion 28 was filed on March 31, 2020. The government concedes that Rehaif applies retroactively and that this motion is timely. (ECF No. 40).

Petitioner argues that this court lacked subject-matter jurisdiction due to the indictment's failure to state Rehaif's mens rea element. (ECF No. 38). To establish subject-matter jurisdiction, the indictment must sufficiently allege an "offense[] against the laws of the United States." 18 U.S.C. § 3231; see United States v. Ratigan, 351 F.3d 957, 962 (9th Cir. 2003). The government responds that this circuit has held that "defects in an indictment do not deprive a court of its power to adjudicate a case." Ratigan, 351 F.3d at 962–63 (quoting United States v. Cotton, 535 U.S. 625, 630 (2002)). The law on this question is clear. "A district court 'has jurisdiction of all crimes cognizable under the authority of the United States . . . [and][t]he objection that the indictment does not charge a crime against the United States goes only to the merits of the case.'" Cotton, 535 U.S. at 630–31 (2002) (quoting Lamar v. United States, 240 U.S. 60, 65 (1916)). The Ninth Circuit has found that petitioner's position is "untenable in light of . . . Cotton." United States v. Velasco-Medina, 305 F.3d 839, 845 (9th Cir. 2002). Indeed, the indictment here refers to the applicable statute and thus adequately informs defendant of the charged offense. See United States v. Ruelas, 106 F.3d 1416, 1419 (9th Cir. 1997). This court finds no defect in subject-matter jurisdiction.

Next, this court examines the government's argument that petitioner waived his ability to attack the sufficiency of the indictment when he entered into his guilty plea. (ECF No. 40). "When a criminal defendant has solemnly admitted in open court that he is in fact guilty of the offense with which he is charged, he may not thereafter raise independent claims relating to the deprivation of constitutional rights that occurred prior to the entry of the guilty plea." Tollett v. Henderson, 411 U.S. 258, 267 (1973).

Petitioner responds that he has not waived his claims because they are jurisdictional. (ECF No. 41); see United States v. Johnston, 199 F.3d 1015, 1020 (9th Cir. 1999) (finding an exception to waiver for cases in which "the indictment failed to state a valid claim."). As this court has already found, his claims are not jurisdictional. See Cotton, 535 U.S. at 630–31 (2002) ("A district court 'has jurisdiction of all crimes cognizable under the authority of the United States . . . [and][t]he objection that the indictment does not charge a crime against the United States goes only to the merits of the case.'").

Here, petitioner challenges only the missing Rehaif element throughout his proceedings prior to the entry of his guilty plea—an issue that may be cured by a new indictment. (ECF No. 38). Courts have identified these types of challenges as non-jurisdictional and waivable by

1 guilty plea. See Class v. United States, 138 S. Ct. 798, 805 (2018); see also United States v.
 2 Dowthard, 948 F.3d 814, 817 (7th Cir. 2020) (“[A] guilty plea waive[s the] right to assert that
 3 the indictment fail[s] to state an offense.”); United States v. Lavalais, 960 F.3d 180, 186 (5th Cir.
 4 2020) (“To the extent [the defendant] argues his indictment is fatally defective because it did not
 5 contain an element of the offense under § 922(g), he failed to preserve that claim by pleading
 6 guilty.”). This court finds that petitioner’s guilty plea bars his instant claims. However,
 7 recognizing that the Ninth Circuit has yet to speak on this issue, this court will proceed to 8 examine procedural bar as well.

9 To overcome procedural bar, petitioner’s claim must demonstrate “cause and prejudice,
 10 or actual innocence” in order to overcome his failure to raise the claim on direct appeal.
 11 Massaro, 538 U.S. at 504. Petitioner does not claim actual innocence; thus, he must demonstrate 12 1) cause and 2) prejudice. (ECF No. 38).

13 Petitioner appropriately satisfies “cause” not to raise the issue of Rehaif on direct appeal.
 14 At the time, Ninth Circuit law found in opposite to Rehaif. See United States v. Enslin, 327 F.3d 15 788, 798 (9th Cir. 2003) (“No mens rea is required for the felon status element of the felon in 16 possession statute.”). “[W]here a constitutional claim is so novel that its legal basis is not 17 reasonably available to counsel, a defendant has cause for his failure to raise the claim in 18 accordance with applicable state procedures.” Reed v. Ross, 468 U.S. 1, 16 (1984).

19 However, petitioner was not prejudiced. In the context of a guilty plea, prejudice 20 requires that petitioner demonstrate “a reasonable probability that, but for [the] errors, he would 21 not have pleaded guilty and would have insisted on going to trial.” Hill v. Lockhart, 474 U.S. 52, 22 59 (1985). A growing number of courts have denied § 2255 challenges regarding Rehaif for 23 their failure to show prejudice as to overcome procedural default. United States v. Lowe, No.
 24 214CR00004JADVCF, 2020 WL 2200852, at *1 n. 15 (D. Nev. May 6, 2020) (collecting cases);
 25 see also United States v. Reynolds, No. 2:16-CR-00296-JAD-PAL-3, 2020 WL 5235316 (D.
 26 Nev. Sept. 2, 2020); United States v. Bueno, No. 2:17-CR-00406-RCJ-GWF, 2020 WL 4505525
 27 (D. Nev. Aug. 5, 2020). Here, petitioner served at least two felony sentences, in excess of seven 28 years’ imprisonment, long before his current conviction. The record demonstrates that petitioner knew that he had been convicted of these felonies, having spent more than a year in prison on each occasion. This court finds that petitioner fails to establish a “reasonable probability” that he

1 would not have pled guilty or that the government would not have been able to prove Rehaif's
2 mens requirement beyond a reasonable doubt. Hill, 474 U.S. at 59.

3 Alternatively, petitioner suggests that his indictment's defect is a "structural error" which
4 would automatically satisfy prejudice. (ECF Nos. 38, 41). "[S]tructural errors are a very limited
5 class of errors that affect the framework within which the trial proceeds, such that it is often
6 difficult to asses[s] the effect of the error." United States v. Marcus, 560 U.S. 258, 263
7 (2010) (quotations omitted). Petitioner notes that the Ninth Circuit has ruled that an indictment's
8 failure to state a "necessary allegation of criminal intent" is structural error. United States v. Du
9 Bo, 186 F.3d 1177, 1181 (9th Cir. 1999). "[I]f properly challenged prior to trial, an indictment's
10 complete failure to recite an essential element of the charged offense is . . . a fatal flaw requiring 11 dismissal of the indictment." United States v. Omer, 395 F.3d 1087, 1088 (9th Cir. 2005)
(quoting United States v. Du Bo, 186 F.3d 1177, 1179 (9th Cir. 1999)).

12 This court is unconvinced that Du Bo's statement applies to the instant situation. First,
13 this court takes cues from Omer's dissent from denial of rehearing en banc, which—while non-
14 binding—at least demonstrates that Du Bo is controversial within the circuit. United States v.
15 Omer, 429 F.3d 835, 837 (9th Cir. 2005). Judge Graber, joined by five of her colleagues, call for 16 a reexamination of Du Bo in light of Cotton, 535 U.S. at 630, which "directly eliminated the jurisdictional premise for the automatic reversal rule." Id.

17 Most persuasively, the Omer dissent notes a plethora of cases in which the circuit
18 reviewed defective indictments for plain error and ultimately found the error harmless. Id. at 19 838; see United States v. Velasco-Medina, 305 F.3d 839, 847 (9th Cir. 2002) (holding that "any 20 defect in the indictment was harmless"); United States v. Leos-Maldonado, 302 F.3d 1061, 1064
21 (9th Cir. 2002) ("Leos cannot meet the third condition [of the plain error standard]."). Indeed,
22 this outcome is at odds with the label of "structural error," where true structural error "def[ies]
23 analysis by harmless error standards." Weaver v. Massachusetts, 137 S. Ct. 1899, 1907–08
(2017).

24 Furthermore, a growing number of circuits have found no structural error in the context
25 of Rehaif. See United States v. Coleman, 961 F.3d 1024, 1027 (8th Cir. 2020); United States v.
26 Trujillo, 960 F.3d 1196 (10th Cir. 2020); United States v. Hicks, 958 F.3d 399 (5th Cir.
27 2020); Ruelas v. Wolfenbarger, 580 F.3d 403 (6th Cir. 2009); but see United States v. Gary, 954
28 F.3d 194 (4th Cir. 2020). Finally, "in Rehaif itself, the Supreme Court remanded for harmless-error review rather than reversing the conviction outright.” Reynolds, 2020 WL 5235316, at *5 (citing Rehaif, 139 S. Ct. at 2200). Thus, this court declines to interpret the instant defect as structural error. Petitioner fails to overcome procedural bar.

In light of the foregoing, this court denies petitioner’s motion to vacate, set aside, or correct sentence pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255.

IV. Certificate of Appealability

The court declines to issue a certificate of appealability. Under 28 U.S.C. § 2253, the court may issue a certificate of appealability only when a movant makes a substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right. 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). To make a substantial showing, the movant must establish that “reasonable jurists could debate whether (or, for that matter, agree that) the petition should have been resolved in a different manner or that the issues presented were ‘adequate to deserve encouragement to proceed further.’” Slack v. McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 484 (2000) (citation omitted).

The court finds that petitioner has not made the required substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right to justify the issuance of a certificate of appealability. Reasonable jurists would not find the court’s determination that movant is not entitled to relief under § 2255 debatable, wrong, or deserving of encouragement to proceed further. See id. Accordingly, the court declines to issue a certificate of appealability.

V. Conclusion

Accordingly,

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED, and DECREED that petitioner’s motion to vacate, set aside, or correct sentence pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255 (ECF No. 38) be, and the same hereby is, DENIED.

The clerk is directed to enter separate civil judgment denying petitioner’s § 2255 motion in the matter of Newman v. United States, case number 2:20-cv-00620-JCM.
